

One System, Not Six Campaigns

Each platform operates at a different altitude, but all six work together to build Boardroom’s institutional authority.

Platform	Role in the System	Primary Outcome
A Seat at the Table	The always-on conversation	Depth, trust and executive voice
10 Minutes in The Boardroom	The public discovery engine	Executive visibility and emerging relationships
Incubation Week	The member benefit	Retention, utility and owned IP
The Boardroom 100	The authority	Global relevance and editorial power
The Boardroom Awards	The stage	Live spectacle, partnerships and cultural visibility
The Classroom	The impact platform	Access, opportunity and future-talent pipeline

DESIGN DIRECTION: Use a circular ecosystem or vertical hierarchy in the deck; the table is content guidance only.

The Always-On Communications Engine

Big ideas create spikes. A disciplined press office builds the baseline that makes every spike more valuable.

- Narrative development: Ongoing messaging for Rich, Boardroom and priority executives.
- Executive profiling: Long-form profiles, interviews, broadcast, podcasts, bylines and commentary.
- Speaking and visibility: A-list conferences, industry forums, awards, lists, red carpets and cultural calendar moments.
- Corporate communications: Strategic initiatives, partnerships, executive appointments and new business lines.
- Relationship building: Sustained engagement with influential journalists, producers, event organizers, founders and cultural leaders.
- Channel amplification: Translate earned moments into newsletter, social, video, print and Members Club programming.
- Issues counsel: Senior guidance on reputational opportunities, sensitivities and response strategy.

INCREMENTAL PROGRAM BUDGET: $0. The Always-On Communications Engine is included in the monthly retainer and leads with earned opportunity. Only pre-approved pass-through expenses, travel or paid amplification sit outside the fee.

DESIGN DIRECTION: This slide establishes TCG's traditional media-relations strength and prevents the proposal from reading as ideas without execution.

Platform 01 — The Boardroom 100

Boardroom's owned annual recognition of the people shaping the global intersection of business, entertainment, culture and sport.

The Concept

An annual, globally minded list of 100 influential builders, operators, creators, disruptors and investors—selected through credible editorial judgment, not membership or pay-to-play access.

Why It Matters

- Moves Boardroom from seeking recognition to becoming the recognizer.
- Creates a scalable global platform without requiring immediate international event production.
- Builds institutional authority that strengthens future profiles, speaking invitations and partnerships.
- Creates a natural bridge into Boardroom's print magazine, newsletter and digital ecosystem.

Rich's Role

The editor-in-chief figure whose taste, judgment and network the list represents—quoted on selections and positioned as the connector behind the institution.

ESTIMATED INCREMENTAL BUDGET: $0 when strategy, selection architecture, press launch and earned media use Boardroom's existing editorial and design resources. Optional outside research, design or content production: $40,000–$100,000.

DESIGN DIRECTION: Hero concept. Visual language should feel editorial and globally authoritative, not like a membership roster.

The Boardroom 100 — PESO & Partnership Model

PESO	Activation
Paid	Presenting sponsor; luxury, financial services, private banking, watches or premium automotive.
Earned	Nominee and honoree profiles, power-list coverage, inclusion discourse and global trade outreach.
Shared	Honoree badges and social toolkits designed for self-amplification at scale.
Owned	Dedicated hub, print package, newsletter takeover and selection-editorial content.

Credibility Guardrails

- Visible selection methodology and a credible committee beyond Rich alone.
- Global and cross-industry representation from year one.
- No membership requirement and no sponsor influence over editorial inclusion.
- A first cohort prominent enough to establish immediate prestige.

DESIGN DIRECTION: Use a clean PESO quadrant plus a separate credibility callout.

Platform 02 — The Boardroom Awards

Where Cannes Lions, Adweek and the ESPYs meet.

The Concept

An annual live program celebrating the people and brands outside traditional sports that are reshaping the business and influence of sport.

Starter Categories

- Fashion — design houses, stylists, footwear and material innovation.
- Technology & Innovation — AI, data, wearables and fan experience.
- Mobility & Travel — automotive, aviation and hospitality.
- Design & Architecture — stadiums, training facilities and brand environments.

Role in the System

The live, sponsorable and photographable stage where The Boardroom 100 is unveiled and Boardroom's authority becomes a cultural spectacle.

ESTIMATED INCREMENTAL BUDGET: $750,000–$1.5 million for venue, production, talent, hospitality and content capture. Build only with sponsorship commitments and a phased production plan.

DESIGN DIRECTION: Position this as a premium event platform with red-carpet, broadcast and partnership inventory—not simply another awards show.

The Boardroom Awards — PESO & Partnership Model

PESO	Activation
Paid	Title and category sponsorships, ticketed tables, hospitality and branded environments.
Earned	Nominee coverage, trade storytelling, red-carpet pickup and winner profiles.
Shared	Nominee, presenter, winner and partner amplification across adjacent audiences.
Owned	YouTube/site livestream, recap packages and Members Club pre-event access.

Rich’s Role

Host or co-host, presenter of the flagship honor and the central executive voice across pre- and post-event coverage.

DESIGN DIRECTION: Potential brand-partner categories: premium auto/EV, fintech, private banking, technology, hospitality, aviation and luxury.

Platform 03 — 10 Minutes in The Boardroom

A recurring video franchise that turns access to Boardroom's leadership into a public platform for discovery, advice and executive visibility.

The Concept

Entrepreneurs, creators and emerging operators compete for ten focused minutes inside The Boardroom. Members or the broader audience help select participants; winning conversations are filmed, edited and distributed as a flagship short-form franchise.

The Executive-Team Evolution

- Rich remains a marquee host, reinforcing his role as a connector and operator.
- Select episodes feature other Boardroom executives matched to the participant's sector, challenge or ambition.
- Each executive develops a visible lane of expertise and a library of concise, quotable perspectives.
- The franchise creates proof points that support external speaking pitches, panels, interviews and commentary opportunities.

ESTIMATED INCREMENTAL BUDGET: $125,000–$250,000 for an initial 8–10 episode season, depending on production approach. Participant strategy, executive positioning and earned-media amplification are included in the retainer.

DESIGN DIRECTION: The visual identity should feel like entry into a real Boardroom—premium, intimate and access-driven—not like a generic startup pitch show.

10 Minutes in The Boardroom — Format & PESO

- Format: 10–15 minutes; intimate, lightly produced and optimized for YouTube and social cutdowns.
- Guest mix: Founders, creatives, operators and periodic wildcard names across music, entertainment and sport.
- Membership mechanic: Members receive nomination or voting privileges, making the club active rather than passive.
- Executive rotation: Host selection is based on subject-matter fit, giving the wider team intentional visibility.

PESO	Activation
Paid	Presenting sponsor such as a bank, fintech or business platform.
Earned	Founder profiles, standout advice roundups and trade/startup media coverage.
Shared	Entrant promotion during voting creates built-in distribution and discovery.
Owned	YouTube episodes, newsletter voting, social cutdowns and Members Club layers.

DESIGN DIRECTION: Show the host bench visually: Rich at the center, with select executives rotating by expertise.

Platform 04 — A Seat at the Table

Boardroom's long-form audio front door: a weekly habit that builds depth, trust and familiarity with its leaders.

The Concept

A 45–60 minute conversation series with the people operating at the intersection of business, entertainment, culture and sport—built for the candor and depth that rarely emerge during a press-tour interview.

Host Structure

- Rich serves as the flagship host and primary voice of the franchise.
- For select episodes, members of Boardroom's executive team host or co-host based on their expertise and relationship to the guest.
- Executive-led episodes are editorially intentional, giving each leader a distinct public lane rather than using rotation for rotation's sake.
- Two-hander episodes can pair an athlete or artist with an operator or founder, with the host acting as connector and moderator.

ESTIMATED INCREMENTAL BUDGET: $150,000–$300,000 annually for production, editing and distribution. Editorial development, guest strategy and earned-media amplification are included in the retainer.

DESIGN DIRECTION: The podcast should feel like one franchise with a strong center—not a collection of unrelated executive shows.

A Seat at the Table — Editorial Engine & PESO

- Rotate guests deliberately across business, entertainment, technology, culture and sport.
- Create a recurring ‘Who deserves a seat?’ closing segment that feeds editorial texture into The Boardroom 100.
- Use full episodes to build familiarity; use clips to create weekly press and social entry points.
- Program executive-hosted episodes around the company’s priority narratives and external speaking lanes.

PESO	Activation
Paid	Presenting and mid-roll partners across financial services, travel, spirits, watches or technology.
Earned	Clip-led pickup tied to guest news, executive commentary and industry conversations.
Shared	Guest distribution compounds reach into new non-sports communities.
Owned	Full episodes on Boardroom platforms; cutdowns across Instagram, YouTube, X and newsletters.

DESIGN DIRECTION: Show the full-to-short content cascade: episode → clips → newsletter → press hook → social conversation.

Platform 05 — Incubation Week

A private, member-only offsite where Boardroom's community builds something real—not another summit where people simply talk.

The Concept

An invite-only, multi-day experience bringing together operators, creatives and technologists in small teams to develop a product, campaign or tool, with AI serving as the accelerant.

- Creates a premium, high-utility Members Club benefit.
- Generates owned intellectual property and documentary-style content.
- Produces a tangible earned-media hook: what was built, why it matters and what ships next.
- Offers a natural presenting role for an enterprise AI or software partner.
- Keeps membership value distinct from The Boardroom 100's independent editorial recognition.

ESTIMATED INCREMENTAL BUDGET: $250,000–$500,000, depending on location, duration, participant travel and production. This should move forward only with a committed enterprise or presenting partner.

DESIGN DIRECTION: Membership is never a prerequisite for The Boardroom 100. A honoree may later be invited to join; the relationship runs one way to protect editorial credibility.

Access Is the Curriculum

The Concept

Boardroom has built its business around access—to athletes, entrepreneurs, executives, creators, investors and cultural leaders shaping what comes next. The Classroom turns that access outward: a philanthropic platform led by Rich Kleiman that gives the next generation of entrepreneurs and creative leaders access to the people, knowledge, relationships and opportunities that can accelerate a career.

Not another leadership conference. Not a lecture series. A classroom without a campus, where the people building the future teach the people who will build what comes next.

The Opportunity

The premise comes from something central to Rich's own career: proximity changes possibility. Talent matters, but so does understanding how industries work, how decisions get made and how relationships open doors. The Classroom gives emerging talent access to the unwritten curriculum of modern business—the lessons rarely taught in school but essential to building a career.

- How do you turn an idea into a company?
- How do you negotiate when you have never been in the room before?
- How do creators build equity instead of simply accepting endorsement checks?
- How do relationships become a network without becoming transactional?
- How do you pitch an investor—and recover from failure?
- How do you build cultural relevance without chasing it?

The teachers are not traditional professors. They are the people actually doing it.

ESTIMATED INCREMENTAL BUDGET: $175,000–$350,000 for the annual cohort and one-day experience; optional fellowship funding of $75,000–$150,000 is separate. University, nonprofit and brand partners can underwrite program costs.

DESIGN DIRECTION: Frame The Classroom as Boardroom's philanthropic access platform. The visual language should feel selective, intimate and high-touch—not academic or conference-like.

The Format

A selective annual cohort of 25–40 emerging entrepreneurs, creators and future executives, identified through university, community and nonprofit partners alongside an open application. The program culminates in an intensive one-day Classroom experience hosted by Rich.

- First Period: The Business — Rich Kleiman on entrepreneurship, relationships, building Boardroom and lessons from his career alongside Kevin Durant.
- Second Period: The Money — A founder, investor and athlete on equity, negotiating, raising capital and building wealth.
- Third Period: The Idea — A creator, CMO and entrepreneur critique participant ideas for relevance, resonance and viability.
- Fourth Period: The Room — How to network without being transactional, pitch yourself, follow up and know when to ask.
- Final Period: Office Hours — Each participant receives a focused mentorship conversation with one relevant person from the Boardroom network. The program ends not with a certificate, but with an introduction.

The Classroom Fellowship

Select three to five Classroom Fellows from each cohort for a year of meaningful access, potentially including:

- Mentorship from Boardroom executives
- Boardroom Members Club membership
- Attendance at select Boardroom programming
- Introductions to relevant executives
- Professional-development funding
- A paid project or internship opportunity

The promise: The Classroom does not just teach you how to get into the room. It helps open the door.

DESIGN DIRECTION: Use a school-day structure for the five periods, then give the fellowship its own elevated callout. Keep the tone premium and modern; avoid literal classroom imagery.

SLIDE 14

The Content & Relationship Flywheel

The system discovers people, deepens relationships, confers authority and creates moments the market wants to amplify.

Stage	Platform	What It Produces
Discover	10 Minutes in The Boardroom	Emerging voices, executive POV and public participation
Deepen	A Seat at the Table	Long-form trust, relationships and editorial texture
Build	Incubation Week	Member value, tangible output and owned IP

Stage	Platform	What It Produces
Impact	The Classroom	Philanthropic access, mentorship and emerging-talent relationships
Recognize	The Boardroom 100	Global authority, discourse and honoree amplification
Celebrate	The Boardroom Awards	Live spectacle, partnerships and cultural visibility

DESIGN DIRECTION: Render as a flywheel rather than a funnel. Keep Incubation Week on a parallel member track so it does not imply that membership earns recognition; position The Classroom as a parallel impact track that turns Boardroom’s access outward.

A Global Platform From Year One

The Boardroom 100 is the most efficient first proof that Boardroom's authority can travel globally.

- A list can include a founder in Lagos, a designer in Milan or a technologist in Tokyo without requiring a physical event in each market.
- Global selection broadens Boardroom's relationships before international production costs are incurred.
- Honoree amplification introduces Boardroom to high-trust audiences across regions and industries.
- Year-two Awards, Incubation Week or partner activations can follow the markets where the strongest response emerges.

Editorial Requirement

Global cannot mean a U.S.-first roster with a few international additions. Regional balance and credible outside voices must be built into selection from the beginning.

DESIGN DIRECTION: Use a world map only if the designer can keep it editorial and uncluttered; this is about reach of authority, not office locations.

The Annual Arc

Timing	Platform	Strategic Purpose
Ongoing	A Seat at the Table	Weekly depth, trust and executive voice
Q1–Q2	10 Minutes in The Boardroom	Public discovery and recurring executive visibility
Spring	Incubation Week	Private member utility and owned output
Annual	The Classroom	One-day cohort experience and year-long fellowship
Fall	The Boardroom 100	Global announcement and earned-media peak
Fall	The Boardroom Awards	Live unveiling, red carpet and sponsorship moment

Always On, Across Every Quarter

Executive profiling, speaking, corporate communications, relationship building, cultural-calendar visibility and channel amplification continue throughout the year.

DESIGN DIRECTION: Translate into a clean horizontal timeline with the press-office engine running beneath all six platforms. Add The Classroom as an annual impact moment with the fellowship continuing year-round.

PESO Architecture

Every recommendation is designed to create earned credibility, owned authority, shared reach and paid scale.

Paid	Earned	Shared	Owned
Presenting sponsors; category partners; paid amplification; premium hospitality	Profiles; broadcast; speaking; trade stories; winner and honoree coverage	Guest, entrant, honoree, executive and partner amplification	Newsletter; social; YouTube; podcast; print; site; Members Club; events

The Commercial Opportunity

The platforms create credible partnership inventory for non-sports brands seeking access to Boardroom’s influence ecosystem—without forcing those brands into conventional sports sponsorship models.

DESIGN DIRECTION: This should be a visual synthesis slide, not a text-heavy matrix. Use the content above as copy inputs.

Brand-Partner Ecosystem

Category	Best-Fit Platforms	Strategic Logic
Financial services / fintech	100; 10 Minutes; Podcast	Founder access, influence and business-building credibility
Technology / enterprise AI	Incubation Week; Awards	Tooling, innovation and tangible product output
Luxury / watches / spirits	100; Awards; Podcast	Association with taste, leadership and cultural influence
Mobility / auto / aviation	Awards; 100	Premium access and relevance at the intersection of sport and culture
Hospitality / business travel	Awards; Podcast; Incubation	Executive audience, experience and convening
Education / professional services	The Classroom	Early-career access, workforce development and measurable social impact

DESIGN DIRECTION: Use categories, not speculative brand logos, unless outreach or existing relationships support naming specific prospects.

Measurement & KPIs

Success should be measured by the authority, recognition and access the program creates—not impressions alone.

Dimension	Illustrative Measures
Earned media	Quality and volume of profiles, interviews, broadcast, commentary and corporate coverage; message pull-through; sentiment
Executive visibility	Speaking invitations, moderator roles, list and award recognition, red-carpet and cultural-calendar access
Audience & reputation	Branded search, share of voice, executive name recognition, non-sports audience growth and qualitative perception
Owned & social	Episode reach, completion, subscriptions, newsletter conversion, clip performance and partner/guest amplification
Strategic relationships	New relationships with media, producers, founders, event organizers, brands and global influencers
Commercial value	Sponsorship interest, member conversion/retention, partnership pipeline and repeat platform participation

DESIGN DIRECTION: Use a scorecard framework. Final targets should be set after a baseline audit and alignment on the approved program mix.

What The Concrete Group Brings

Senior communications counsel built for the overlap of business, culture, media, talent and high-visibility moments.

- More than 20 years of experience executing executive positioning, media relations and culturally relevant brand communications.
- Direct relationships across business, entertainment, technology, lifestyle, culture and trade media.
- Founder-level strategic attention and a senior-led operating model.
- The ability to connect narrative strategy with earned media, talent, partnerships, events and owned-channel amplification.
- A point of view that treats relationship building and cultural access as strategic communications—not add-ons.

DESIGN DIRECTION: Insert 2–3 proof points or short case-study tiles once final examples are selected. Avoid a generic capabilities slide.

Senior Team & Rate Card

Market-Aligned Senior Team

The account is structured around five senior executives and specialists, supported by a dedicated project manager. Monthly allocations are planning assumptions and flex according to news cycles and priority moments.

- Nicole Marzan — Senior Lead, PR + Partnerships / Account Lead — $400/hour — 16 hours/month
- Kate Nelson — Senior Lead, PR — $350/hour — 14 hours/month
- Jesse Nicely — Cultural Strategist — $300/hour — 10 hours/month
- Lauren Drescher — Social Media & Influencer Relations — $300/hour — 10 hours/month
- Louis Roger — Creative Director — $325/hour — 10 hours/month
- Whitley Ngo — Project Manager — $185/hour — 25 hours/month

Modeled monthly total: 85 hours | Standard rate-card value: $25,175

Rates are agency billing rates reflecting senior expertise, agency overhead and the integrated nature of the assignment; they are not employee wage equivalents.

DESIGN DIRECTION: Present as a clean three-column team grid: person/role, standard hourly rate and planned monthly allocation. Emphasize five senior specialists plus dedicated PM support.

Fee Structure & Monthly Retainer

Recommended Structure

A 12-month retained partnership centered on earned media, executive visibility and senior strategic counsel.

Monthly retainer: $25,000

- Estimated team commitment: 80–90 hours per month; modeled at 85 hours
- Standard rate-card value at 85 hours: approximately $25,175 per month
- Annual agency fee: $300,000

What the Retainer Covers

- Always-on narrative development, executive positioning and media relations
- Speaking strategy, commentary, bylines, awards and cultural-calendar visibility
- Corporate communications, partnership counsel and priority relationship building
- Senior account leadership, creative oversight, project management and reporting

Separate, Pre-Approved Costs

- Third-party production, venue, fabrication, talent, creator and vendor fees
- Travel and entertainment, newswire distribution, paid media and on-site staffing beyond the agreed team allocation
- Production budgets for proprietary platforms, approved individually and potentially offset through sponsorship or brand partnerships

Competitive Positioning: Direct access to five senior specialists plus dedicated project management—without the junior-team dilution common in larger agency structures.

DESIGN DIRECTION: Lead with the $25K monthly retainer and 85-hour senior-team commitment. Show production budgets as optional, separately approved scopes—not prerequisites for an effective earned-media program.

SLIDE 23

Closing

We are not proposing six disconnected campaigns. We are proposing the institution Boardroom can own.

A globally credible annual list. A live stage that crowns it. A weekly podcast and short-form franchise that build relationships and executive visibility all year. A private offsite that makes membership useful. A philanthropic platform that turns access into opportunity. And an always-on communications engine that turns every element into sustained authority.

The Outcome

Boardroom becomes the place that identifies, convenes and celebrates modern influence—and Rich Kleiman and the executive team become recognizable voices at the center of that system.

DESIGN DIRECTION: End on the thesis, not a recap of deliverables. Minimal copy, premium imagery and a decisive final line.
